

a good girl, and read your Bible, say your prayers, and obey your parents and your teachers, this is the place which you will certainly go to after you are dead, and there be happy for ever and ever ; I say, if you are good ; for it is so fine and so pure a place, that there shall in no wise enter into it any that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie.

So much then for the Museum, which is a very curious place, and hath entertained you, I hope, to your satisfaction.

Containing an Account of the Library.

THE last place you will be conducted to is a large Library, where the Giant (who is fond of spending a great deal, and indeed the greatest part of his time : so that he has no time to do any other one but you will meet with him especially if you go in the morning, he says, is "the Muses;" and, therefore, he commonly rises about seven o'clock in the morning, as I often before. What a fine thing it will be, if all my little Masters will be so too ; for,

"Early to bed, and early to rise,
Is the way to be healthy, wealthy, and wise."
